I've been thinking about that Ruger carbine. How do you like it?

I was thinking it would be nice to have because of ammo price and availability to swap with my pistol. I'm wondering what the accuracy is, quality of build, etc.

It's kind of heavy.. but it's a takedown.. and it's a Ruger so very reliable, accurate, and solid build quality

Do it

Gun-ownership through a liberal lens.

This is a place for liberal gun-owners who want to discuss gun ownership absent the "noise" of most conservative-dominated pro-gun forums.

"Liberal" here is "left-of-center". This is a place for those who would identify as Democrats, Progressives, Socialists, &c. That generally doesn't mean "classical liberal" or libertarians.

Build quality is solid, I am a terrible shot, but I can get some ok groups at 50 yards.

Can you hit a torso sized object while you are prone out or leaning/resting at 50/200 yards with a 223 or better? Congratulations you're ready for 90% of SHTF combat.

Me: "Hm... That does look kind of nifty, and it would be nice to have a handy little rifle in the same caliber as my carry pistol."

Ruger: "MSRP: $649.00"

Me: "Oh, okay. I'll just stick with my $500 AR, then."

The selection of ARs kinda suck out here in CA though. I was thinking this might be a decent option. Saw one cerakoted at a show in December and almost got it then. Kinda wish I would have now.

What kind of rifle is that? Doesn't look off the shelf.

At first thought it was a shotgun then zoomed in a realize that magazine was to small for shotgun. .22 Mag?

↕ I'm from Hawai'i, growing up my best friend was Japanese, his girlfriend was Filipino, my neighbors were Korean, Thai, Vietnamese, Laotian, Chinese, Tongan, Samoan, Maori, etc. I grew up loving Asian cultures so much, they helped to define who I am today. That says a lot considering I'm a 6'4" white as hell looking dude covered in Polynesian tattoos. My Asian and black neighbors were really surprised when I left a note and contact info on every one's door telling them that if any one gives them grief to let me know along with the appropriate authorities. I have no patience for that shit. The angry Hawaiian in me comes out when I see that going on. Anyhoo, excellent taste, I'm glad you're taking steps. That's smart. Much Aloha!

 [-] Yaleisthecoolest 2 points 4 hours ago

Good on you for defending yourself. If you can swing it, get a rifle in a rifle caliber next. I mean 100% no disrespect to your current choice. I just want you to be appropriately armed for a defensive fight, and a pistol caliber carbine ain't it.

permalink embed save report reply

 [-] atomic-diarrhea [\[S\]](#) 2 points 4 hours ago

Yea I have a Ruger AR556.. I know I'll get downvoted to hell for an unpopular opinion but I think pistols (and pistol caliber rifles) are the only realistic home defense weapon for most... shotguns are deafeningly loud when fired indoors and require a shit ton of training to know how to shoot accurately and when/how to use what specific rounds.. AR15s are even worse re: permanent hearing damage and temporary deafness (suppressors are still loud) when fired inside — shotguns and ARs just don't seem realistic to me on sound alone.

What do you mean by defensive fight? Hopefully I'll have my ear protection on in whatever scenario

permalink embed save parent report reply

 [-] Yaleisthecoolest 1 point 3 hours ago

I mean if you know you're going into a fight, and you have a rifle in a rifle caliber, you should take that rifle. I have shot a lot of guns indoors, and I will take 5.56 with earpro or deafness without over a pistol caliber carbine. Hell, in most cases I would reach for a 308 before a 9mm. You do you though. I'm not here to correct you.

Question for OP, I keep hearing about this but I haven't seen it in my area, have you experienced any uncomfortable situations since this has started? However while my gun stores doors were open still, we did get in a lot of Chinese immigrants and Asian Americans coming in to purchase handguns

I have the same weapon light/mount. I bought an anker Bolder (~900-1200w) light to replace the ~400w light that came with it. I highly recommend it.

I mean, if I'm buying a firearm shaped like that, it better be chambered for 12 gauge 3 inch shells.

permalink embed save report reply

[-] atomic-diarrhea [S] 1 point 4 hours ago

Yea that's why I like the shotgun aesthetic.. but to each his/her own

But I can also carry multiple 33 round mags and regular pistol mags that fit both the rifle and the pistol.. shotguns have limited ammo volume options

Shotguns also take a shit ton more training and pain tolerance (being deaf and recoil) to be effective on how/when to use what type of ammo — these are skills I don't have.

Also I have pets and am too concerned about the pellet spread, so would never get a shotgun for indoor home defense

permalink embed save parent report reply

[-] darkstar1031 1 point 4 hours ago

I guess you and I are just that different. I grew up in the woods, and I know that 12 gauge 00 buckshot will only spread about 4 inches for any realistic indoor distances, the recoil isn't that bad for me, I can easily crank out single arm shots if I want, but then I'm not exactly a small man.
